introduction

《Stray Birds》 is a book of poetry written by Tagore, an Indian poet. It includes 325 beautiful untitled poems. By depicting extremely common things, such as grass, fallen leaves, birds, stars, rivers and so on, these little poems in the shape of a few words contain rich thoughts and profound philosophical theories, and show a fresh, lively, beautiful and meaningful style.

introduction of the author

- Rabindranath Tagore is an Indian poet, a writer, a social activist, a philosopher and an Indian nationalist(印度民族主义者).
- Born into a wealthy aristocratic (贵族的) family in Calcutta, India, he was able to write long poems and ode poems at the age of 13.
- In 1913, he became the first Asian to win the Nobel Prize for literature with gitangali (吉檀迦利).

"Tagore is a poet with pure personality", "a poet who sympathizes with the weak and the oppressed people", "a poet who encourages patriotism and arouses Indian youth to resist British imperialism".

“泰戈尔是一个人格洁白的诗人”，“一个怜悯弱者，同情于被压迫人们的诗人”，“一个鼓励爱国精神，激起印度青年反抗英国帝国主义的诗人”。(沈雁冰评)

Great love is silent. Tagore outlines his love for nature and life with his silent writing. Pursuing truth in nature and advocating nobility in life are Tagore's wisdom beyond ordinary people. He conveyed the true meaning of survival and the value of human nature. He reflected on himself and was modest and cautious. Tagore constructed a palace of truth with simple language. It is undeniable that the simplicity of this unique language makes stray birds somewhat difficult to understand, but this does not affect its profound and priceless philosophy. From Tagore's writing, I get a serious attitude of loving life and thinking about love. There is no doubt that Tagore's inspiration comes from life and is higher than life. He loves life, so he hides the suffering and darkness in life and retains the light and joy.
