Skewers and alcohol is a combination that has been charming Beijingren since the invention of skewers and alcohol, which, come to think of it, were probably some of the first things ever invented. Really, meat+sticks+fire—it must have been a Neolithic Era invention. It's easy to be impressed by some, say, champagne foie-gras superfood bullshit. It's harder to impress someone with chuan'r.

And yet, White Tiger Village does just that. The lamb skewers are lightly seasoned and juicy without being oily. They're savory, like any proper Dongbei food should be, but not drowning in salt.

烤串和酒的搭配一直深受北京人的喜爱，因为你想想看，它们可能是人类最早发明的东西了吧。确实，肉+棍子+火——这一定是新石器时代的发明。一些香槟、鹅肝之类的高逼格食物很容易俘获食客们的心，但要用“串”来打动他们就比较难了。

然而，白老虎屯就做到了。他们的羊肉串微微调味，多汁而不油腻。就像所有正宗的东北菜一样，味道醇厚，但又不会过咸。

火和风都是一种自然现象 (现在时)。在奥运火炬传递史上，也曾经出现过火炬熄灭的情况 (一般过去)，//为此，我们特意准备了火种灯和备用火种灯。在本次传递过程中，火种护卫人员反应迅速，及时用火种灯点燃火炬，符合操作规程，//使火炬传递活动正常运行。在火炬传递过程中，即使出现火炬熄灭的情况，也丝毫不会影响奥运火种的唯一性和神圣性。 Fire and wind are both natural phenomena. In the history of Olympic torch relay, the torch went out a number of times. In case of this, we have prepared a safety lantern and a backup safety lantern. In this relay, the flame attendant responded quickly and relit the torch in accordance with the protocol so that the event went on as planned. Even if the torch goes out during the relay, the uniqueness and sanctity of the Olympic torch still remain.

The Beijing Winter Olympic Village (Winter Paralympic Village) (Beijing Winter Olympic Village for short in the following), lies in the Olympic Sports Culture and Business Park in Chaoyang District, Beijing. The village is adjacent to the National Swimming Center, the National Stadium, and the National Speed Skating Stadium and many other competition venues, which covers an area (not including temporary facilities) of approximately 230,000 square meters. The layout originates from the siheyuan (quadrangle courtyard) in Beijing with three rows or four rows of apartment buildings enclosing the central courtyard. The residential space embraces both openness and privacy in an ingenious manner.

11月11日是中国的光棍儿节，是单身青年过节的日子。但许多人也趁着这一天到网上扫货，因为各大电子贸易网站会全场半价。

前几天我室友还问我赶在双11促销之前往购物车里存了什么货。她还特别兴奋地让我看了她的购物车，里面放了一双皮靴和一套家纺。我很快就被她的血拼热情感染了，于是和她一起坐在电脑前等着零点到来。

我可以给我妈买件冬大衣，再给我爸买双棉鞋。其实这样买东西还挺方便的，我心里想，就点一下“去付款”，输信用卡密码，就把全家的事情都搞定了。

可好不容易等到零点，支付网页却无情的崩溃了。页面上只能看到一张卡通图片。图片里的收银员忙得焦头烂额，前面排了一队人。图片下方的文字显示：“抱歉，当前顾客较多，请您耐心等待”。(北京外国语大学2014年硕士研究生入学考试复语同声传译专业试题)

November 11 is the Singles' Day in China, a day for young singles and also for shoppers who are ready to have a shopping spree on the Internet, because major e-commerce websites in China will offer 50% discount on almost all items during that day.

Several days ago, my roommate asked me what I had put in my shopping cart before the Singles' Day promotions. She was very excited to let me see her shopping cart, where a pair of leather boots and a set of home textiles were put. I was quickly impressed by her excitement, and sat before the computer with her to expect the arrival of the Singles' Day.

I decided to buy a winter coat for my mom, and a pair of cotton-padded shoes for my dad. I said to myself, "it is very convenient to buy things in this way, I just need to click 'Go to the payment,' enter my credit card password so that everything for my family is done. "

We waited all the time until zero o'clock, only to find the payment page was unexpectedly down. We could only see a cartoon picture on the page. The cashier in this picture was terribly busy, with a queue of people waiting in front of him (her). Below the image, there was a sentence: "Sorry, there are too many customers now, please wait."

If American Vogue editor Anna Wintour has a reputation for being intimidating--then Angelica Cheung should be wholly unapproachable. As the editor-in-chief of Vogue China (and the youngest person to take up that role in the history of Vogue worldwide), Cheung presides over a title whose readership is greater than the British, French, Italian and German Vogues combined.

Since launching the magazine in 2005, Cheung has built one of the title's most dynamic and international editions practically from scratch. In an industry where shrinking advertising revenues seem to be affecting everyone, Cheung has managed to continually increase editorial volume, simply to keep up with advertisers' demands.

Her magazine is so popular, in fact, that Cheung has been forced to add 12 supplements a year to the monthly publications. On top of that, of course, there are her rising number of digital products--iPad editions, WeChat subscriptions, mobile apps and the like.

It's 8:45 on a Monday morning, and unsurprisingly, Cheung is the first one to arrive at Vogue's Beijing office--a sleek, airy open space in the capital's Central China Place. Framed by her renowned asymmetrical, sharp black bob-- a style she's had for 14 years-- there's a refreshing frankness about her that, while not necessarily "nice", is certainly unaffected.

如果说《Vogue》美国版杂志主编安娜·温图尔以其令人望而生畏而闻名，那么张宇便完全可以说是难以亲近/“生人勿近”了。作为《Vogue》中国版的主编（也是该杂志历史上在全球范围内以最小年龄任职的主编），张宇所负责的这本杂志的读者人数超过了英国版、法国版、意大利版和德国版读者人数之和。

从 2005 年创办《Vogue》中国版以来，张宇几乎从无到有地建立了这个杂志最具活力与国际化的版本之一。在一个广告收益不断萎缩并正在影响所有人的行业里，她设法使文字编辑量持续增加，这单纯是为了满足广告商的需求。

事实上，她的杂志非常受欢迎，以至于张宇不得不在每月正刊之外增刊。除此之外，她还在不断地增加数字产品——iPad 版本、微信公众号、移动应用程序等。

现在是周一早上 8 点 45 分，意料之内的是，张宇是第一个到达《Vogue》北京办公室的人——这里是位于首都华贸中心的一个高端时尚、通风良好、视野开阔的空间。她那出名的不对称而干练的黑色波波短发——一个她保持了 14 年的发型风格——勾勒出了她的面容轮廓。这使她身上带有一种别具一格的直率，虽然不一定和蔼可亲，但肯定是毫不做作的。

In the pre-modern era, political, economic, and social life was governed by a dense web of interlocking relationships inherited from the past and sanctified by religion. Limited personal freedom and material benefits existed alongside a mostly unquestioned social solidarity. Traditional local orders began to erode with the rise of capitalism in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, as the increasing prevalence and dominance of market relationships broke down existing hierarchies. The shift produced economic and social dynamism, an increase in material benefits and personal freedoms, and a decrease in communal feeling. As this process continued, the first modern political ideology, classical liberalism, emerged to celebrate and justify it.

在前现代时期，政治、经济和社会生活被编织/笼罩（/由……支配）在一张环环相扣的关系网中，这是一张承袭于过去并为宗教所神化的网。与有限的个人自由和物质财富并存的是一种几乎不受质疑的社会关系。随着 18、19 世纪资本主义的兴起，传统的本土秩序开始受到侵蚀，由于市场关系的日益盛行并占据主导地位，现有的等级体系被打破。这种转变为

经济和社会注入了活力，带来了物质财富和个人自由的增长与群体感的减弱。随着这一进程的持续，第一个现代政治意识形态——古典自由主义登上了历史舞台，并为之赞颂和辩护。

Liberalism stressed the importance of the rule of law, limited government, and free commercial transactions. It highlighted the manifold rewards of moving to a world dominated by markets rather than traditional communities, a shift the economic historian Karl Polanyi would call “the great transformation.” But along with the gains came losses as well—of a sense of place, of social and psychological stability, of traditional bulwarks against life’s vicissitudes.

自由主义强调法治、有限政府和自由商业交易的重要性。它的重点在于走向一个由市场而不是传统社群主导的世界所带来的多种回报，经济历史学家卡尔·波兰尼将这种转变称为“大变革”。但是，有得必有失——地域归属感、社会和心理上的稳定，以及传统意义上抵御生活变迁的堡垒随之丧失。

Left to itself, capitalism produced long-term aggregate benefits along with great volatility and inequality. This combination resulted in what Polanyi called a “double movement,” a progressive expansion of both market society and reactions against it.

就其本身来说，资本主义产生了长期的诸多利益，同时也带来了巨大的不稳定与不公平。这两方面的融合形成了波兰尼所谓的“双重运动”，即自由市场社会的逐步扩张和反抗。

Youth unemployment levels in Europe are hitting new highs: more than 5.7 million (23.6%) young people (under 25) in the European Union (EU) were without a job in January 2013, and this trend indicates that things are not getting better. While this dramatic situation fell off the radar of EU media and public attention at the onset of the economic crisis, it has now become a recurrent headline in European news. Indeed, youth unemployment was significantly lower when the crisis broke out and public attention was mainly focused on brutal and sudden lay-offs hitting citizens who were relatively well-established in the labour market and had not experienced any such difficulties in the past. The issue of youth unemployment was, therefore, perceived as less pressing for two reasons: first, the difficult transition from school/university to work was nothing new but a structural problem, which a lot of EU member states were already facing before the crisis; second, commentators believed that the younger cohort, in particular the most qualified, would be less affected by the recession in the long run and would easily manage to find a job once the crisis was over.

It was clearly wrong to underestimate the issue of youth unemployment. As the crisis persisted and the scale of the problem became evident, attention progressively shifted. This change of focus was the result of two ongoing phenomena.

On the one hand, most EU countries saw an ever increasing number of young people struggling to get a foothold in the labour market. Hence, with youth unemployment more than double the rate of the total population, it became clear that the crisis was having a disproportionate impact on young people. Depending on how long young people remain jobless, this situation could have serious long-term consequences on the structure and performance of our labour markets. Indeed, whereas European labour markets will increasingly depend on the active and productive participation of young people due to ageing populations, a country's productivity could significantly deteriorate if a large number of young people were to remain unemployed for a long time, leading to a loss of skills and human capital in the long run. Beyond the question of labour market outcomes, high levels of youth employment are also a necessary, but not the only, precondition for maintaining our welfare state, in particular pension and healthcare systems. On the other hand, waves of mass protest which were - and still are - generally carried out by young individuals brought their frustration out into the open. Young people's frustration with a system which is no longer able to respond to their aspirations or to meet their basic needs, such as having a job, could not be further ignored and became a hot topic for policymakers. Other factors such as growing dissatisfaction with the global financial system and the feeling that mainstream political parties have become too distant from realities on the ground, have certainly played a role in prompting this tide of rebellion. However, it is clear that difficulties entering the labour market together with poor economic prospects and low purchasing power, often leading to high dependency on relatives' savings, are pressing concerns for millions of young Europeans.

欧洲的青年失业水平正在屡创新高：在 2013 年 1 月欧盟（EU）有超过 570 万（占比 23.6%）的青年人（25 岁以下）处于失业状态/没有工作，而且该趋势表明事态并未好转。尽管在经济危机爆发之初，这种严重的情况/严峻形势没有受到欧盟媒体和公众的关注，但如今它已频频出现在欧洲新闻的头条。事实上，青年失业率在危机爆发之初比现在低得多，所以公众的注意力主要集中在那些野蛮突然的裁员上，受到冲击的是一些在劳动力市场地位稳固而且过去从未有过被裁员经历的员工。

因此，青年失业问题被认为不那么紧迫的原因有两个：首先，从学校/大学到工作之间的过渡并不是什么新鲜事，而是一个许多欧盟成员国在经济危机前就已经面临的结构性问题；其次，评论员认为，青年人特别是最优秀的青年人从长远来看不太可能受到经济衰退的影响，一旦危机过去，他们就能很容易地找到工作。青年失业问题绝不应该被低估。随着危机持续和失业规模扩大，公众的注意力终于逐渐转移到失业上来。这背后有两个正在发生的现象。

事实上，由于人口正在老龄化，尽管欧洲劳动力市场将越来越多地依赖于青年人的积极和富有成效的参与。但如果大量青年人长期失业，一个国家的生产力状况可能会显著恶化，劳动力将在相当长的一段时间内丧失技能而国家将损失人力资本。除了给劳动力市场带来的影响外，青年的高就业率也是维持我们的福利国家，尤其是养老和医疗保险体系的必要但不唯一的前提之一。另一方面，青年人组织的大规模抗议活动一波又一波地袭来，并让公众知道了他们的不满情绪。青年人对一个不再能够实现他们的抱负或基本需求（如工作）的系统感到沮丧，这种沮丧情绪再也无法被忽视，成为了政策制定者们关注的热点话题。其他因素如对全球金融体系的不满以及感到主流政党与现实脱节，都推动了这波抗议浪潮的出现。然而，就业困难、经济前景黯淡、购买力低下通常意味着青年人需要亲属的资助，这一切显然让千百万欧洲青年人感到焦虑不安。
